

Joseph Nolan

Vice President, Business Development, Superior Bulk Logistics, Inc.

Joe has 44 years of industry experience in a number of diversified business disciplines. Joe began his career in agribusiness with Corn Products International, now Ingredion, in 1972. During his early tenure at Corn Products he held various Sales Management positions in Industrial, Food, Drug and Chemical and Animal Nutrition businesses. Joe went on to hold senior management positions as Director of the North American Sweetener Business, Global Business Development and Global Supply Chain Management.

Upon retiring from Corn Products in 2006, Joe began consulting on logistics projects for major food companies until joining Superior Bulk Logistics as Vice President of Business Development. At Superior Joe has managed key account development and management while starting and advancing the development of their Transportation Management System business initiative.

Joe holds a BA in Political Science and a MBA in Business Management from Fairleigh Dickinson University. He has served as a Board Member for the National Freight and Transportation Association, on the Board of Governors for the Chicago Traffic Club, as Chairman of the Chicago Association for Transportation Law, Logistics and Policy, as an advisory Board Member for High Road Consulting and a Professional Advisor for DePaul University.